++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Remaining settled but turning wet and very windy midweek.

This Evening and Tonight:
Remaining dry into the night with clouds breaking up in most areas during the late evening, allowing for some lengthy clear periods. Feeling cold with frost likely under clear skies. Minimum temperature -5 deg C (23 deg F).

Monday:
Feeling cold with a morning frost but a largely dry day, bar the odd patch of rain in the north. Turning rather cloudy, feeling pleasant where sunshine peaks through. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Patchy light rain on Tuesday and winds strengthening throughout, potentially turning to gales by Wednesday, accompanied by heavy, widespread rain. Strong winds remain Thursday, but brighter with heavy showers.
